

INTERESTING DEAL
FOR B'WAY CORNEROld Evening Post Building at Fulton Street Leased—To Be Altered.

FINE ESTATES SOLD

Several Costly Places Find
New Owners—Broadway
Loft Property Sold.

Interesting changes are planned for the former Evening Post Building at the southeast corner of Broadway and Fulton street, that property having been leased to a real estate operator, who intends to turn it into a property suitable for use as a hotel. The deal for the building has been closed, except for the formal exchange of papers. It is held now under lease by the liquidating committee of the Broadway Bank, who took over several years ago from Ward & Co. The bank has now arranged to lease the whole property to Elias A. Cohen, who has formed a syndicate to handle the operation. It is the intention of the new lessee to cut up the lower part of the structure into small units and sublease them as they did in the building at the southeast corner of Broadway and John street.

The property is owned by the Reformed Dutch Church, which gets a ground rent of $45,000 a year on a lease which has twenty-one years to run with renewals. Extensive alterations are to be made, which include the installation of high pressure elevators, a new heating system, rearrangement of partitions and other interior betterments.

At present there are several important tenants as Loft, including the Evening Post Print, the New York Herald and Monroe Clothes. All their leases expire in 1917, at which time the new lease will take over the building and make the alterations. The building has nine stories and basement and fronts 42 feet on Broadway and 102 feet on Fulton street. During recent years it has been known as the International Trust Building, because a company of that name which held the property under lease for a short time occupied space on the main floor.
